

LIFESTAGE CHARACTER PROFILES

Background

LUNA 18-year-old university student, working part-time at the hub as a waitress

- She's studying animation and wants to open her own studio someday.
- This is her first job and she's really excited to be making her own money.
- Problem is, she doesn't have much experience with money. She's so thrilled every time she gets a paycheque download, she wants to spend it all, right away. Too bad life on her own is a lot more pricey than she'd thought it would be.
- She's moved away from home and is living in a ratty Metro-flat with a roommate who's in pre-med.
- She's into the synth-digital video scene and goes to obscure film clubs where they feature bands playing to a backdrop of experimental films. Her roommate thinks she goes for the guys, but she really goes to check out the artwork in the films.
- There's this really hot guy, Rio, who works at the café as a busser and dishwasher. He's incredibly good-looking and is some kind of jock-star and clearly has a thing for her... But there's also this other guy, Nikos, who hangs out at the café a lot. He's quiet, keeps to himself... but there's something cool about him...

Nikos 18-year-old apprentice, in a full-time work/study program to be a wrist-pod technician

- He's fascinated by technology. As a kid, he constantly reprogrammed the family's MetroLink modulator and downloaded the newest software upgrades.
- He has an idea for fine-tuning the wrist-pod so it could be used to automatically adjust the lighting in a room to create mini-lighting environments to suit each person's needs and preferences. It's a brilliant idea - but it hasn't exactly set the world on fire. Yet.
- He's moved away from home for the first time and is loving the independence. Unfortunately, though, he's sharing a Metro-flat with three other roommates and is getting sick of never having any privacy. Not to mention the mess.
- He gets paid as an apprentice, but not much, so he has to be careful with his money. But that's not a problem because he's a careful person anyway. The kind of guy who knows, at all times, exactly what his MetroBank balance is.
- He likes taking late-night walks along the CanalWay, watching the moon ripple on the water, solving technical design problems and thinking about...
- Luna. He's got it bad. Has no idea how to approach her. He's jealous of Rio, who just has to smile and the girls come running. Even Luna. Or does she? Maybe he has a chance. Nah. No way, not him.

Rio 20-year-old, working full-time as a busser and dishwasher at the café

- He's a talented athlete who plays the Game for MetroDynamo. All his life, he's been the Most Valuable Game Player on every team he's ever been on. He's fast and strong, with lightning reflexes.
- He's only ever wanted one thing: to be a professional Game player. To get signed to the Pro Game League. To be the best Game player who ever lived, set records, elevate the Game.
- Also... to sign a fat contract, make it rich, have all the money he could ever want and just play. Travel, yachts, sports cars, parties, fun. 'Cause life's for living, so why hold onto your cash?
- He doesn't make much at his job, but doesn't save either because he's sure he'll make it big.
- He's tall and muscular. Not vain but he knows he's good-looking. It's obvious, the way girls fall all over him. So why not play along? No harm done on either side.
- There's this new girl at the café, a waitress. Luna. Cute. He's interested. More than interested. Why not? Could be fun.

Sienna 20-year-old culinary school graduate holding down two part-time jobs

- She works as a cook at the café and as a sous-chef at an expensive gourmet restaurant in a swanky neighbourhood.
- She has one goal that she's been dreaming of ever since she was a teenager: to open her own restaurant. A classy place with a sophisticated fusion menu.
- As far as she's concerned, the food at the café - muffins, sandwiches, soup - isn't exactly gourmet fare. But working there is good training. She's learning how to produce, fast, and she's grateful to Gaia for giving her a start.
- To reach her goal, she's been saving faithfully from both paycheques, every week, no matter what. The total is growing, slowly, steadily. Having enough to open a restaurant is a long way away - she's giving herself five years - but every deposit is a step closer.
- She's seeing a very nice older guy, who's pressuring her to marry him and let him take care of her. But that would mean giving up her dream. Besides, she doesn't want to be taken care of. She just wants to open a restaurant that's so fantastic - not only the food, but the décor, the service, everything - that people will talk of the experience for years to come. So she might have to cut the guy loose. Soon.

Indigo 25-year-old university graduate with a well-paying salaried job

- She's an executive with CitySecure, the company that provides computer security for all the MetroBank terminals in The City. An incredible position for someone her age - she rose through the ranks quickly because she's smart and capable. And knows how to play the corporate game.
- She grew up dirt-poor in a rundown house, and has never forgotten it. Going to bed hungry and wearing three-times-hand-me-downs. Which is why her main goal is to have plenty of money, so she'll never have to worry or scrimp or feel lesser-than again. Which, in turn, is why, even though she's making good money now, she tends to hold onto it. Because you can never have too much.
- There's one area that she does splurge on, though. Being the kid who never had decent shoes or clothes has made her want to look good all the time. For this girl, it's only the best clothes, shoes, perfumes, bags, jewellery.
- Which all look great on her. She has a great sense of style - and a killer smile.
- She's dating Zack, a handsome and wealthy older man. Much older. Who also happens to be Gaia's ex - who owns the café where they often meet. Which complicates things.

Liam 25-year-old college graduate with a spouse and one child

- He's a nurse at a MetroMed hospital. Understaffed and overbooked, it's a stress factory. He's chronically wiped out.
- As a starting nurse, his wages aren't great, and he and his wife, Avonel, have decided that she won't work until the baby is older. So they are constantly behind on their bills, overdrawn on their MetroBank account, maxed out on their credit card.
- Still, he loves his job and wouldn't want to do anything else. Helping people get better, cope with pain, even die peacefully, is, for him, the best work in the world.
- He's crazy about his wife and baby and can think of nothing better than having an infant slobber all over his shirt.
- He and his wife can't afford to live on their own so they're living with her parents. Not an ideal arrangement. They're dying to buy their own home, but on his wages it's out of the question. Maybe in a couple of years. Three... Four...
- He often stops in at his aunt Gaia's café for breakfast after a night shift.

Zack 45-year-old marketing consultant, divorced

- He's Gaia's ex-husband. When they were younger, they spent their time volunteering for nonprofits dedicated to doing good in the world. But he got tired of being poor, so he went into business as a marketing consultant.
- He has a plum contract with MetroForm's Customer Conditioning Division, which is dedicated to moulding good consumers. He's making piles of money, living in a fabulous condo and has lots of expensive toys, like a sports car and a state-of-the-art home sync-vid system.
- Since he and Gaia split up, he's had a string of ever-younger and ever-hotter girlfriends, and is now dating the very-much-younger and very glamorous Indigo.
- He's tall, handsome and athletic.
- He and Gaia have two daughters, one in high school and one in university, of whom they have joint custody.
- He and his ex are amicable about sharing the kids, but not much else. Gaia thinks Zack has become a money-grubbing corporate sell-out, while Zack thinks Gaia uses the café she owns as an excuse for not even trying to get ahead.

Gaia (Pronounced guy-Ah) 45-year-old small business owner, divorced

- She's Zack's ex-wife.
- She's the owner of The Hub Café. Or, as she often calls it, the money pit.
- She's gruff and prickly - on the outside. What's on the inside, she doesn't show. It's a littleknown fact (which she's careful never to tell anyone) that "Gaia" means Earth goddess in Greek mythology. But if you think she's one of those touchy-feely Earth mother types who loves everybody, you can think again.
- She and Zack have two daughters, one in high school and one in university, of whom they have joint custody.
- When she and Zack were younger, they spent their time volunteering for non-profits dedicated to doing good in the world. But, in Gaia's view, Zack turned his back on their values and became a greedy corporate marketing consultant for big bucks. Not that she's jealous of his success or anything.
- No, she'd much rather stick with the honest lifestyle of running the café. She knows the café is a dive but is oddly proud of her shabby little restaurant.
- She's single. Not that she hasn't had relationships since Zack, but nobody special. Meanwhile, just what does Zack think he's doing dating all those women who look young enough to be his daughters?
